Rumors of a romance with former Miss Universe Amelia Vega were debunked. Aventura's front man stated, "I never said we were dating, I simply stated that I was smitten. Those are two very different things." While the members dodged the question, Romeo played it cool and confessed his first love is his career.

The future of the group is unclear even though they are one of the most bankable groups in their genre their next album could be their last. Their contract with their label will expire soon, a situation the guys see an opportunity to explore new options. Romeo, the band's front man, used singer Beyoncé as example in the sense that she records albums as a solo artists but still from time to time rejoins Destiny's Child for concert tours and special appearances. Something that Romeo assures will always be true of Aventura.

After the grand concert at Madison Square Garden on September 1st Aventura will return to their roots and will play smaller venues and nightclubs. Romeo admitted he missed being close to his fans, "I miss having girls ripping my clothes off [while I'm on stage]."
